OGDEN MAN ROBBED OF $325
BY A WOMAN AND MAN WHO
INVITE HIM TO THEIR HOME

Who is the Ogden man in this story of fleeing the sucker, which comes from Chicago? In the Chicago News of last Tuesday appeared a recital of a gang of bunco workers who took $325 from a man traveling from Salt Lake to this city.

This is the story of a woman, who, after a youth of despairs and defeats, fell into the world of crime. Sophisticated, alert, clear headed, she became finally an adroit and dangerous prey upon society. By her wits, by the quickness of her fingers, the cunning and inventiveness of her brain, she stole and cheated her way up and down the continent. At length she came to realize the emptiness of such a life and left it. She now tells her story as a warning to other young women.

(By Minnie Hall.)
The "mob" went to Omaha, which was a "gun town," so that I could mix with "grifters" and get "her" to the game. There was the "Duke," John O' and the Jap and myself. You see, we were going to work four-handed.

As soon as we landed in Omaha, we went straight to Eighth and Capitol streets and took rooms. This was the neighborhood where the "big gun hang out" was. And, when I went around with the "Duke," I tell you, every one said my makeup was swell. All the "grifters" talked about it. It was good, too. I looked so innocent. Nobody could have told I wasn't a young girl just out of some boarding school.

The first night in Omaha we just went around seeing everybody. You see, pickpockets and "con men" always hang together. They usually know where to get in touch with each other.

Next jump to Salt Lake. But we only stayed in Omaha overnight. Next day the "mob" started for Salt Lake. We were on the job now. No more fooling.

On the train from Omaha to Salt Lake, of course, there was a poker game out in the smoker. The men got that up just to make railroad fare. I didn't have any hand in it. But in Salt Lake I saw my first "jack."

The "Duke" and I had gone to the best hotel in Salt Lake and registered as father and daughter. John O' and the Jap went to a boarding house downtown. In "stalling" in the lobby I "made" a man who looked like a good solid mark. We found out he was going to Ogden. So, when this "sucker" went down to the grill, the "Duke" "talked him" and got talking to him. Then the "Duke" mentioned sort of casual, that he lived in Ogden with his daughter and was on his way home.

"That's funny," says the 'sucker,' 'I'm going to Ogden, too.'

Tells "Sucker" of "Little Girl"

Well, the "Duke" went on to tell the "mark" that "his poor little girl" was upstairs. Her aunt had just died and left her a lot of money and a big house full of furniture. The "Duke" explained we had "been in Salt Lake closing up the property." Now everything was settled and we were shipping the furniture to Ogden in a couple of carloads and going on with it ourselves. He said, if the "sucker" would excuse him, he'd have to hurry off and go down to the station to see the stuff was properly shipped.

By this time the "sucker" thought he had fallen in with some real nice people that he could work for introductions to other nice people in Ogden. So he sort of hung on to the "Duke." So then "Papa" says, as though he had a sudden thought, "Wouldn't you like to come upstairs and meet my daughter?"

The mark was tickled to death. Then the "Duke" brought him along to me. He left the "sucker" in my hands while he went off, as he said, "to look after the furniture."

Well, I made an awful fuss over the "mark." Of course, I pretended to like him a lot. And, when I found out he was going to Ogden, I squealed with delight. I said:

"Why! We must be going down on the same train you are! You must have dinner with us when we get home."

Of course, the "mark" had visions right away of a big fat dinner in a mansion with servants all over the place.

When "Papa" came back from the station we three had lunch together in the hotel at Salt Lake. After that the "Duke," the "sucker" and I went down to the train together.

We got into the Pullman early and settled ourselves. There we were, all sitting pretty, when along comes John O' through the train. John was made up to look like an expressman, blue shirt, open at the throat, sweat all over him, and a big bundle of bills lading in his hand. John came through the train calling "Mr. Becker, Mr. Becker!" which was supposed to be the "Duke's" and my name.

Of course "Papa" signaled right away and stopped the expressman and asked him what he wanted. John O' touched his cap and tells "Papa" that he "was very sorry, sir, but the stuff out in the express car couldn't be shipped C. O. D. It had to be paid for."

Well, then "Papa" got awful mad.

He asked the expressman "why he didn't tell him that before? How soon was the train to start? That it was too late to get a check cashed! What should he do?"

Then the "Duke" turned to me and says: "How much money have you got, Sis?"

Well, I went down in my little purse and pulled out $5. Of course, that was funny! That wouldn't help much!

Takes Check for "Express Bill."

Then "Papa" asked the expressman if he "would take a check." The expressman couldn't do that either. "Papa" fussed around, wondering what he would do; until at last he turned to the "sucker" and said:

"I wonder if you would cash my check? We are all going on to Ogden together, and we could go right to the bank when we get there and I would see that it was cashed for you."

Well, of course, the "sucker" never hesitated at all. He said he'd cash "Papa's" check if he had enough money on him. Down he goes into his "jeans" and "Papa" said to the expressman, "How much?" Right there John O' had to guess how much the "sucker" probably had. He did some quick figuring and told "Papa" the bill was $345. It was a pretty good guess.

"Sucker" counted out his money, all he had was $325. But that helped. "Papa" took $325 from him. I chipped in my $5 and then "Papa" scribbled together $15 of his own. He handed the whole lot over to John O' and got the receipt. You see, we left the "sucker" $3. We figured it was a shame to take it all from him.

John O' went through the train and we didn't see him any more.

Rode to Ogden Together

Then the three of us in the Pullman rode on to Ogden together, talking about "how nice it would be to get home," and "how glad we would be to have the man who had cashed 'Papa's' check to dinner with us."

"Of course," I said, "the house has been closed and it's not in order, but you won't mind that?"

The "sucker" said, "Oh! no! That would be all right!"

Then I said: "We couldn't have you out to stop over night until things were more comfortable for you. But if you don't mind the furniture being covered up and all that, it would be lovely to have you out to dinner to night?"

By that time the train stopped at Ogden and we all got off. We were good friends. The man who had cashed "Papa's" check said "he guessed he'd go up to a hotel and take a room." We told him we would go home and drive back for him for dinner at about 6 o'clock.

So Mr. Sucker went on up to his hotel and—that's the last we ever saw of him. The "mob" took the next train out of Ogden. I'll bet that "mark" sweat blood while he was waiting for us to come back and drive him out to dinner.

And that's how I earned my first "end."

From Ogden, where I earned my first "end," the "mob" worked its way four-handed to the Pacific coast. The "Duke," John O' and the Jap played card games between every jump we made, and for a while I don't believe I was much good to anybody. It took time for me to get "her" to my work, anyhow. The "Duke" told me I was worth my fifth of the money to him just the same.

WORTH THEIR WEIGHT IN GOLD.

No man can do his best when suffering from backache, rheumatic pains, swollen joints, sore muscles or other symptoms of kidney trouble. B. H. Stone, 840 N. Second street, Reading, Pa., writes: "I contracted a most severe case of kidney trouble. I gradually grew worse and for months was unable to attend to business. I began to use Foley Kidney Pills and soon found the pains were gone and I have had no aches since. They have been worth their weight in gold to me."

Ogden schools have come to the fore as Liberty bond subscribers, having taken out no less than $23,800 worth of bonds. How did they do it? The students subscribed to a common fund for the school bond, the students bought individual bonds by the easy payment plan, and the teachers followed the same plan for themselves. The report given last night to the bond organization headquarters shows the fruitful results of a methodical campaign among the school young-

DISSOLUTION OF BECKER MAN'FG CO

The Becker Manufacturing company filed a dissolution application yesterday in the district court. Gus L. Becker, the president of the corporation, has issued a statement to the public explaining the action and the reasons for it. The statement follows:

"To Whom It May Concern:

"The stockholders of the Becker Manufacturing Co. have concluded that it is advisable to liquidate its assets and dissolve the corporation. The officers of the company feel that it is their duty to advise the public as to the reasons for this action and its effects.

"The corporation has no outstanding debts or liabilities, legal or moral, which will be in any manner affected by its going out of existence. An arrangement has been made with the Becker Brewing & Maltng company, a corporation of the state of Wyoming, whereby the customers of the Becker Manufacturing Co. will be amply taken care of and supplied with the product heretofore manufactured by the Becker Manufacturing Co., no matter what disposition is made of its assets.

"It follows that no member of the public can in any way suffer from the dissolution of the corporation.

"The occasion for the action on the part of the stockholders is one which the public has long since been advised of. By far the greater portion of the property of the company consists of buildings and apparatus especially designed and constructed for the manufacture of beer. The continuation of this business has been prohibited by law within the state of Utah. The machinery and structures belonging to the company and peculiarly adapted for the production of beer have consequently lost in whole or in great part their value. It has, therefore, seemed advisable to the stockholders and officers of the company to accept at this time the large but uncertain loss which has resulted to the company by reason of the prohibition legislation and to cease to carry on its books values which no longer exist.

"Pursuant to this policy, the corporation will be dissolved; the properties of the company heretofore devoted to the manufacture of beer will be placed upon the market and sold to the best possible advantage; and the assets of the corporation after all of its obligations of every kind have been fully discharged, will be distributed among stockholders.

"This announcement is made to the end that all of the members of the public who have heretofore had dealings with the Becker Manufacturing Co. will be advised that they will be in no manner affected by the policy of the company. The loss resulting from prohibition will fall upon our corporation and the stockholders, and upon one else whatever.

"BECKER MANUFACTURING CO."

"By G. L. Becker, President."
